Hailing from the east of Scotland, Dropkick have drawn on influences such as Wilco, Tom Petty and The Everly Brothers to produce their own blend of harmony-driven alt-country powerpop.

“Songs that capture a power pop spirit tinged with a country edge, shimmering guitars and vocal harmonies recall classic California bands and more local contemporaries such as Teenage Fanclub and Daniel Wylie.” Americana UK

“Scotland’s finest alt-country power-pop band.” Tom Morton, BBC Radio Scotland

“Scotland’s 3rd best band ... fabulous melodies a-plenty and more hooks than Bob Nudd’s fishing bag.” The Scotsman Newspaper

Dropkick is:

Andrew Taylor – Vocals, guitar, keyboards

Alastair Taylor – Vocals, guitar, pedal steel (track 8)

Scott Tobin – Vocals, bass

Ian Grier – Piano, organ, synth

Mike Foy – Drums

+ special guest Tim Davidson – Pedal steel (tracks 1, 4, 11)

“Homeward” is Dropkick’s most varied and accomplished collection of songs to date, demonstrating a growing maturity in their songwriting and arrangements. But it is their ear for melody and harmony that are their finest assets, helping Dropkick’s music appeal to a growing band of fans of all ages, all around the world.

Since the release of their self-titled debut album on their own Taylored Records label in 2001, the band has now released a total of 12 albums and 3 EPs, making them one of Scotland’s most prolific bands. Their 2008 album “Dot The i” was re-issued on Rock Indiana Records of Spain and was also “album of the week” on BBC Radio Nan Gaidheal. In autumn 2008 Dropkick’s relationship with Sound Asleep Records of Sweden began with the release of the critically acclaimed album “Patchwork”. This album, which is officially sold out but now trades for several times its RRP on Amazon and eBay, was followed by a further 3 albums and 1 EP over the next four years. In 2013, Dropkick returned to their roots with their first Taylored Records release for 5 years: a limited edition EP “Style”, which sold out in just over a month. “Homeward” has also been licensed for release in Spain on the Discos Bobo Integral label.

Dropkick have played countless numbers of gigs in their career, including several headline Scottish tours, the Darvel Festival, Tartan Heart Festival, International Pop Overthrow Festival and most recently, 9 sell-out headline shows in Spain (including an album launch gig in Madrid in May 2011). They have also had significant airplay recently, including BBC Radio 2 and BBC Radio Scotland’s Tom Morton, Roddy Hart, Brand New Country, Get It On, Vic Galloway and Janice Forsyth shows. Dropkick have performed 10 songs live on the Tom Morton Show on BBC Radio Scotland, firstly on an outside broadcast in July 2007 and then at the BBC studios in Nov 2007, the latter being part of a Children In Need special. They also played live on the same station’s ‘Highland Café’ show in July 2008 and again in July 2009. Elsewhere, Dropkick have had a huge amount of airplay around the world, but most notably in Spain where the band’s popularity increased dramatically thanks to the internet.

In recent years Dropkick have shared the stage with acts such as Marc Olson, Seasick Steve, The Primary 5, Half Man Half Biscuit, Snow Patrol, Kit Clark (ex Danny Wilson), Nigel Clark (Dodgy), Sid Griffin, Roddy Hart & The Lonesome Fire and ‘Guitar George’ Borowski. Andrew Taylor has also produced recordings by many other bands, most notably the critically acclaimed album “The Long Haul” by The Wynntown Marshals.

In 2011, Dropkick made 59 previously unreleased recordings free to download from their website, including 2 full albums. Following a Scottish tour in April and some festival appearances in the summer, Dropkick will head to Spain once again for a 5 date tour in October 2014.

REVIEWS

"Dropkick are very good. Scotland's finest alt-country power-pop band." Tom Morton, BBC Radio Scotland.

"Scotland's 3rd best band ... fabulous melodies a-plenty and more hooks than Bob Nudd's fishing bag." The Scotsman newspaper.

"Twelve songs that capture a power pop spirit tinged with a country edge, shimmering guitars and vocal harmonies recall classic California bands and more local contemporaries such as Teenage Fanclub and Daniel Wylie." Rating 8/10. Americana UK review of 'Dot The I' album (Paul Kerr).

"The title is hugely appropriate, as these guys really know how to play in a stylish, classy, tradition busting way ... an EP of solid, professional musicianship and lyric writing that both dazzles and endears itself to the listener ... thoroughly good fun and a joy to listen to." Rating 4/5. Is This Music? review of 'Style EP' (Jonathan Whitelaw).

"Inspired and inspiring, soaked in sweetness and confirming an impressive ability to produce beautiful songs" Powerpop Station (Brazil) review of 'Time Cuts The Ties' album.

"Songs of shimmering beauty, chiming chords and an emotional honesty that resonate with a warm familiarity. Moreover, they are masters of melody; forgers of tunes that take up residence in your head and refuse to go away." Kool Kat Music review of 'Paper Trails' album.

"A stunning album ... hazy country balladeering merged with intoxicating dreamy pop makes for a lusciously woozy collection of brilliant songs ... intricate, convincing and zingingly catchy throughout ... no doubt Dropkick have created a record of soaring greatness and personality." Music News Scotland review of 'Dot The I' album (Alan Baillie).

"Sweet-sounding harmonies and quietly melancholic alt-country ... like a wet kiss between the Pernice Brothers and Teenage Fanclub." Rating 4/5. Corren newspaper (Sweden) review of "Patchwork" album.

"A gem of power-pop and pop-country ... all the voices of the group combine to seem like classic Crosby, Stills, Nash & Young." Rating 5/5. Pecan Pie blog (Spain) review of 'Abelay Hotel' album.

"Sibling harmonies reminiscent of The Everly Brothers, sparkling pop guitars, and soft pop melodies with a touch of twang ... fans of The Jayhawks, Teenage Fanclub, and The Lemonheads will love Dropkick." International Pop Overthrow Festival preview.

"Inescapably wonderful ... the album is a gem." Netrhythms review of 'Turning Circles' album (Michael Mee).

"Somewhere between Teenage Fanclub, The Posies and the Cosmic Rough Riders ... thirteen wonderful memories of sunny songs from days gone by with harmony vocals nearing a level of perfection." Rating 4/5. 'Abelay Hotel' album review in Alt-Country Netherlands website (Hugo Vogel).

"An extraordinary talent for writing melodic pop music ... Dropkick is a well kept secret that requires disclosure." Rootsy (Sweden) review of "Patchwork" album.

"Have a listen ... but set aside some time - once you introduce yourself to Dropkick, you're going to want to delve into that deep back catalogue" Absolute Powerpop review of 'Time Cuts The Ties'.

"The harmony between the vocals of the brothers characterizes the whole record ... every single song is a pleasure to listen to and to sing along is accepted, maybe even recommended." Rootstime (Belgium) review of 'Dot The I' album (Valère Sampermans).

"Dropkick are one of Scotland's best kept secrets and a band that any power pop fan will fall in love with at first listen ... beautiful and timeless songs that would even make Teenage Fanclub proud." Stereo Pills music blog (Juan Fiter Gomez).

"Dropkick seem to pull things from hats effortlessly and without arrogance. If they know how good they are live it never becomes immodest. They play beautiful songs beautifully." Subba Cultcha website live review.

"A dynamic combination of ballsy country twang, wry lyrics and luscious pop harmonies." CMU Music Network live review.
